LEISURE TIME AND INTERCULTURAL EVENING

Ascaso is really a hamlet in the Pyrenees, next to the National Park of Ordesa and Monte Perdido. Six houses and a church, which are a genuine representation of the traditional architecture of the High Aragon. The small village is full of old trails, which today are almost disappeared under the vegetation and with the walls backed. Since 2012, a film festival popularly called "The World's Smallest Film Festival" organized only by volunteers and locals. We plan some visits to Boltaña, to Ordesa National Park (walking tour to the Horsetail) and maybe an adventure tourism activity during weekends.

The intercultural evening is a good way of intercultural learning. In every camp there is one evening, when all participants present their country in a relaxed way – making presentation, watching photos, telling stories, tasting typical dishes, drinks and sweets, dances etc. Please, have this evening in your mind while preparing your luggage to share a piece of your culture with the rest of volunteers.
